The Tell Halaf-Project is a working team of people in permanent positions as well as free lancers: Dr. Lutz Martin is the coordinator and represents the project at the funding institutions, Dr. Nadja Cholidis, financed by the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft, is the head of scientific research, while the stone restorer of the Near Eastern Museum, Dipl.-Rest. Stefan Geismeyer, has developed a restoration concept and is in charge of the free lancing stone restorers. Ulrike Dubiel, M.A., scientific researcher, is responsible for the sorting and identifying of the fragments; Hans Nohka supports the team as technical co-worker. In 2003/2004 the following free lancing stone restorers had a part in the project work: Gerhard Kunze, Dipl.-Rest. Sebastian Röhl, Dipl.-Rest. Carsten Schneider, Dipl.-Rest. Knut Zimmermann. The sculptor Hans Hallmann created the mould of the goddess from the entrance façade in Syria and finished the cast in Berlin. Klaus D. Schwarz is accountable for the video documentation of the first animal base.
